The Daily Press.
HONGKONG, APRIL 12th, 1889.

This decline of the China Tea trade—which the Inspector-General of Customs notwithstanding, is only too patent a fact—will certainly attract the attention of the Kwang-pao.
And rightly so; one of the great staple exports of China is threatened with not very gradual extinction, and it behooves the Chinese to consider the best means to avert this misfortune. Our contemporary, in a previous issue, very sensibly advocated both an improvement in the cultivation and the entire re-emption or at any rate the reduction of tekia and export duty on the leaf. A change has now, however, come over the spirit of the writer. He no longer desires the abolition of the duty to give life to the trade, but brings forward a proposal which is not very practical, but the merit at least of novelty. He has pursued Sir Robert Hart's memorandum on the subject, apparently, and sees no prospect for the recovery lost ground by tea, so he calmly suggests that the cultivation of the plant should be discontinued, and the tea gardens laid out as mulberry plantations. The annual dislocation of the export, and the losses yearly sustained by tea growers render it, in his opinion, useless to continue the struggle. It is better, he thinks, to surrender unconditionally than to continue an unequal fight. The Chinese tea must inevitably lose ground unless it is relieved of the principal burdens it carries.
The Can or journalist is clearly of a different opinion to the Inspector-General of Maritime Customs; he wants no argument to convince him that the tea trade is hastening to a fall. Like our correspondent "An Old Hand," he sees only too plainly the cause of the trade, and so possibly would Sir Robert Hart if he could get out of his mind the very serious loss of revenue which the abolition of the duty and tekia on this great staple export would entail. The Inspector-General naturally enough cannot compliment such a reduction of revenue with equianimity, more especially as there apparently seems to be no source from which the deficiency could be made up.

Yet there is a means by which the tea trade might be saved, and the Customs revenue still maintained. It may not have occurred to our Canton contemporary, and perhaps if it had the idea is one that would not find favour with Chinese of the same way of thinking as the Kwang-pao. The tea, it is said, is sold to the new Ministry at a low price, and the tea is then sold to England and France by the Tai Kwoh-yin, a member of the Han college, now residing at Peking. The Mercury is informed on good authority that both these statements are wrong; that the tea is sold to the new Ministry at a high price, and that the tea is then sold to England and France by the Tai Kwoh-yin at a low price.

The Shen-pao says that about one-third of the tea is sold to the new Ministry at a high price, and the tea is then sold to England and France by the Tai Kwoh-yin
at a low price. The Shen-pao also says that the tea is sold to the new Ministry at a high price, and the tea is then sold at a low price. The Shen-pao also says fall off, and with it will melt that portion of Sir Robert's revenue, leaving nothing to fill the void in the treasury. The Inspector-General cannot be blamed. He has made a proposal to tax the native opium on the same basis as the imported article, but this suggestion was over-ruled by the Tientsin Yamen, and he can now only await the turn of events. Sir Robert Hart is a very clever man, and a most successful administrator. Whatever there is of progress in China, that rests on a stable foundation is owing almost entirely to his energy, resource, perseverance, and power of concentration.

But he is only human after all, and therefore cannot change Chinese nature, cannot always make Chinese officials as he does.
He has failed in this question of taxation; he has no means of replacing the loss which the remission of the duties on tea would cause, hence he cannot recommend it, and hence the impotence of his arguments in favour of the status quo. Our Canton con-temporary's suggestion will not be adopted straightway, but it needs no prophet, we think, to say that unless the tea duties be remitted it will come to the same thing in the end.

The delivery of the French mail was begun at 5.30 p.m. yesterday.
The Peking Gazette is glad to hear that Sir Hart has recovered from his recent illness.
Our readers are reminded that tenders for this Hongkong Hotel Company's debentures

Singapore for this port on Wednesday at 11

O. Railway, who was on his way home, has (the Mercury has been telegraphed for this immediately).

H. M. S. Heroine and the Russian gunboat Manjura are at anchor in the harbour. The Heroine is homeward bound while the Manjura goes to Nagasaki.
The hearing of the summons against the barman of the Seamen's Club for selling intem-perating liquors to sailors, took place to-day morning at the Police Court. Mr. Pollock after hearing the evidence fined the defendant $100.

The Shanghai Mercury is authorized by Judge Denby to say that the contradiction to the report published in the Japanese papers to the effect that he had received $300,000 from Li Hung-chang, Judge Denby says that the whole story is a malicious invention, and does not contain a grain of truth.
